

Praise For a Purpose

I Peter 1:3-5

Whatever you are facing, praise is the remedy because it points your heart toward the God of infinite grace. Peter gives you reasons for praising God.

I. Born again to a living hope. (3)

Whatever you are facing, praise is the remedy because it points your heart toward the God of infinite grace. Peter gives you reasons for praising God.

I. Born again to a living hope. (3)

- Based upon God's mercy.

Whatever you are facing, praise is the remedy because it points your heart toward the God of infinite grace. Peter gives you reasons for praising God.

- I. Born again to a living hope. (3)
 - Based upon God's mercy.
 - Grounded in resurrection power.

Whatever you are facing, praise is the remedy because it points your heart toward the God of infinite grace. Peter gives you reasons for praising God.

II. An inheritance. (4)

Whatever you are facing, praise is the remedy because it points your heart toward the God of infinite grace. Peter gives you reasons for praising God.

II. An inheritance. (4)

- “Heaven is the place where God makes His presence known and where His people are most at home.” - Gruden

Whatever you are facing, praise is the remedy because it points your heart toward the God of infinite grace. Peter gives you reasons for praising God.

III. Guarded by God. (5)

Whatever you are facing, praise is the remedy because it points your heart toward the God of infinite grace. Peter gives you reasons for praising God.

III. Guarded by God. (5)

- “Our faith takes hold of His power and His power strengthens our faith, and so we are preserved. Faith puts us within His walls and sets the soul within the guard of the power of God.” – Leighton/Thomas